

The interior apparatus, against itself in ordinary times

The ministry of the interior together with the governorates and municipalities it administers: rank held on the eve of each rupture against the rank of the next post taken within five years. Each panel is scaled to its own total. The row beneath every rupture is the same cohort drawn from five ordinary years of the same era, which is the only thing that makes the row above it readable. On this measure the three ruptures move little: +3.8, -4.2 and +2.2 points of tier-crossing demotion against their own eras.

■ moved up a tier ■ stayed in tier ■ moved down a tier

Source: Journal Officiel de la République Tunisienne, 1957–2026 (6,378 French issues, jort.tn). Author's extraction. The interior ministry alone cannot carry this figure: over three years it supplies 63, 157 and 81 movers, of whom 24, 34 and 21 stand above the bottom tier. The unit is therefore the ministry with its territorial administration, the window is five years rather than three, and the ranks collapse to three tiers. Each of those widens the measure, and the result is not the +21.0 points the ministry-level demotion figure reports for the interior in 2021: that figure counts any fall in rank over three years for the ministry proper, where this counts only falls that cross one of two boundaries, over five years, across a body several times larger. Both are true of what they measure; neither is a check on the other.